Mobiles track you

► Smartphones automatically collect your locations, privacy commissioner warns

There are unintended consequences of having our smartphones and other wireless devices automatically collect data on our whereabouts, warns Ontario Information and Privacy Commissioner Ann Cavoukian.

Privacy should be designed into cellphones and Wi-Fi systems to prevent the automatic collection and storage of personal data by the devices, which only continue to grow in popularity, Cavoukian said in a special report.

Most people had no idea their location and other data were being recorded and compiled until Apple recently said its iPhone 4 tracked and stored phone location data on the user's home computers, without the user's knowledge, she said.

"We're getting a lot more interest in the notion of embedding privacy as a default feature in the design of technology as they're being designed, so it's not an afterthought," Cavoukian said in an interview.

Information, including actual geographic locations about where you visit, shop, eat and bank, is gathered by mobile phones and other Wi-Fi devices, including printers, and could be compiled into profiles of individuals with only minimal effort, warned Cavoukian.

- ▶ Three more Car Free festivals planned for downtown this year
- ▶ Events to coincide with major festivals and events in London

KYLE REA
@METRONEWS.CA

It's a festival that encourages people to abandon their cars and walk or bike around downtown London, checking out shops while enjoying some food.

But did the first Car Free Festival weekend pan out for local businesses in the city's core?

Merchants seem to think so, and they can't wait until the next one comes around.

"It's very nice just to see people out, walking around," said Sam Shoebottom from City Lights bookstore. "Yesterday, it was funny seeing people still sticking to the sidewalks. It has that nice welcoming feeling."

The store had a booth on Dundas Street, offering free books for passersby. "It's a goodwill gesture," said Shoebottom.

"There's definitely a buzz about what's going on down here," said Ashleigh Evans, also from City Lights. "We've seen big success and an increased amount of people knowing about us and the festival. It's great."

Restaurants were also able to take advantage of the festival to showcase some of what they had to offer.

"It brings the crowd down here and gives the people of London an opportunity to walk around, enjoy the weather and try out some new things," said Maria Vergiris of Mascot Restaurant. "I believe more people are down here this weekend. There (are) a lot of festivals going on and I think it's really drawn a crowd out."

Not only would she like to see more Car Free Festival weekends in downtown London, but she's in favour of making Dundas Street car-free for the entire summer.

"I think it's ambitious, but it's doable. The City of London can handle something like this, and it would be very beneficial to the downtown core."

8 events this year

- ▶ This year marks the first Car Free Festival weekend.
- ▶ Last year, Car Free Sundays proved to be popular among businesses and residents alike.
- ▶ Dundas Street between Ridout and Colbourne streets was blocked off to cars.
- ▶ There are eight Car Free festivals planned for the City of London this year — four in the downtown and four in communities, such as Wortley Village.

▶ Pedestrians, store owners and vendors fill Dundas Street over the weekend at the first Car Free weekend in downtown London. Building on the success of last year's Car Free Sundays, this time around Dundas Street to Colbourne Street was closed off to cars, allowing shoppers to wander and check out goods in the downtown.

Food Drive surpasses million-pound target

Thanks to the generosity of the community, the 15th annual London Cares Curbside Food Drive has helped stock the shelves at the London Food Bank.

After a slow start, the curbside portion of the food drive finished with two strong days in zones A (Oakridge, Westmount, Byron) and B (Masonville, Whitehills, Sherwood Forest) with 26,800 pounds collected. With a call to action from food bank and city staff, contributions at grocery stores and Tim Hortons drop-off locations also did very well.

However, it was corporate donations that greatly assisted the Curbside Food Drive exceed its target and

RECORD BREAKING

Man, son pull two trucks

A Cobourg, Ont., strongman has pulled off another world record, but this time he had a little help from his son.

Reverend Kevin Fast and his 18-year-old son Jacob set the Guinness World Record for heaviest vehicle pulled by two people on Saturday.

They pulled two fire trucks 30 metres down Queen Street in Cobourg in 38 seconds as hundreds of people cheered.

The trucks together weighed more than 72 tonnes. For an encore, the reverend lifted 20 people on a platform on his back at the pier.

The event was a fundraiser for Habitat for Humanity, a cause Fast became involved in last September when he pulled a house 11.95 metres.

Female suicide up in army

The place they fought over so many years was quietly handed over to the Americans yesterday as their withdrawal from Kandahar hit full stride.

Wounded soldier to climb Kilimanjaro

► Using prosthetics, he and a group of peers will trek up a mountain to raise money for orthopedic surgery

JEREMY NOLAS
@METRONEWS.CA

Reaching Africa's highest peak is difficult enough. Doing so without use of your own legs is a challenge few would attempt.

But 26-year-old Calgary soldier Mark Fuchko is used to taking adversity head on.

"He's pretty determined, slightly stubborn," chuckled his father, Jack Fuchko. "He's climbed lots of mountains. This is just another one."

Jack's comments refer to years of difficult rehabilitation Mark has endured after suffering critical injuries on duty in Afghanistan's Kandahar province. He lost both legs in March 2008 but began walking again before the year was out.

Fuchko's focus now is on aiding others in similar situations. He and other participants on the Kilimanjaro Climb hope to raise $575,000 to purchase a computerized navigation system for the Orthopedic Surgery Centre at Edmonton's Royal Alexandra Hospital.

► Mark Fuchko with his father, Jack, in 2008. Mark was severely injured in an explosion earlier that year.

Fuchko said he initially believed losing his legs was a "death sentence."

"There were some really hard days," he said. "You come from this high level of activity ... and then you are in a wheelchair and just going to the bathroom is a challenge."

Fuchko, who has prosthetics, credits much of his recovery to "overwhelming" support from family and fellow soldiers.

On the climb, he will be joined by three fellow Canadian Forces members. The group plans to set off Aug. 8 and climb six hours

Pressured by increased scrutiny of terrorist money sources and strikes aimed at its financiers, al-Qaida's core organization in Pakistan turned to kidnapping for ransom to offset dwindling cash reserves, U.S. officials say, based on information they found in files taken from Osama bin Laden's compound.

► Independent operators voice concerns at hearing about anti-competitive behaviour in mobile market

With more and more TV content in Canada being delivered online through mobile devices such as smartphones and tablets, Canadian regulators open hearings this week on possible measures to ensure a level playing field for service providers.

Public Mobile will ap-

In recent years, much of Canada's private broadcasting sector has been swallowed up by a handful of big companies. The CRTC said it was worried that consolidation could produce anti-competitive behaviour. THE CANADIAN PRESS

BILLETING CAN PROVE TO BE A BANG

URBAN COMPASS

JILL ELLIS
METRO LONDON

Kathy Tull is pretty easygoing, but she draws the line at guests bringing live ammo into her home.

One of the many Londoners providing billets for Fringe Festival performers, Tull is hosting Tony Molesworth this year.

"He's a vaudevillian artist. He went overseas to entertain the troops and was juggling grenades, so I had to tell him that my house is a grenade-free zone," laughs Tull.

Molesworth is from Toronto, but most of the performers Tull has hosted over the past five years have been from the United Kingdom. Getting to know people from different countries, along with showing them ours, is her favourite thing about billeting for the Fringe.

"It's a great way to show them what it's like here. I take them on road trips up to the Bend or down to Port Stanley and tell them our stories, like the Black Donnellys. They share their (stories) with us."

Some comic moments have resulted, like when Tull and one of the acts from England were wandering down the beach a couple of years ago.

When looking at the other beachgoers' attire, the fuddled foreigner realized his faux pas in wearing black socks and heavy black shoes with shorts. "He went out and bought sandals right away," says Tull. "They have to get used to our hot weather."

There are no great demands on the hosts, according to Tull. She cooks meals for them sometimes, but also likes to bring home Portuguese-style chicken from one of the restaurants in her ethnically rich east-side neighbourhood.

According to Kathy Navackas, executive producer of the Fringe, this 12th season of the festival will see 47 theatre companies that include 150 to 175 performers. Eleven of those companies are international, hailing from Korea, England and the United States, while seven are from other provinces, mainly British Columbia, Quebec, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. She estimates 30 performers will be billeted by Londoners.

Matt Panesh, the Monkey Poet, has billeted twice with Tull and says that besides the economic benefit, the greatest advantage is getting a local perspective.

"The best thing from the performer side is that a stranger in town has an ideal guide," he writes via email. "And it's really great meeting people when you're on the road."

He adds that London's ability to offer billets is one of its strong points. "Not all Fringes offer billeting and that's a consideration. There are two festivals that I'm not applying to for this precise reason."

Say hi to Tony and Kathy when you're at the Fringe this week, but watch out for live ammo!

Worth mentioning

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates.

A Saudi woman defiantly drove through the nation's capital while others brazenly cruised by police patrols in the first forays of a campaign that hopes to ignite a road rebellion against the male-only driving rules in the ultraconservative kingdom.

It was a rare grassroots challenge to the Western-backed Saudi monarchy as it tries to ride out the Arab world's wave of change, and a lesson in how the uprisings are taking root in different ways. In this case, the driver's seat was turned into a powerful platform for women's rights Friday in a country where women have almost no political voice.

"We've seen that change is possible," said Maha al-Qahtani. She said she drove for 45 minutes around the capital, Riyadh, with her husband in the passenger seat. "This is Saudi women saying, 'This is our time to make a change.'"

About 40 women took part in Friday's show of defiance. No arrests or violence were reported, though al-Qahtani was later ticketed for driving without a licence.

Freeloaders not allowed in space

The billionaire businessman behind Virgin Galactic says William Shatner, and other celebrities, shouldn't expect any free rides into space.

The space tourism enterprise is already taking reservations for flights, which could begin next year.

But it's become clear that the actor who played Captain James T. Kirk, perhaps the world's most famous fictional spaceman, is not among the 440 people from 40 countries planning to go up.

"William Shatner has said that he's scared to go into space and it's quite ironic really when you think of his career," company founder Sir Richard Branson told The Canadian Press. "And, like most celebrities, he would like a freebie."

The cost of a seat is $200,000 US.

The 80-year-old actor recently admitted he did not want to boldly go anywhere beyond the Earth's atmosphere.

Branson suggested the Star Trek actor is in the minority. "Most people are unlike William Shatner. I would say nine out of 10 people — if they could afford it — would love to go into space." THE CANADIAN PRESS

All that glitters at MMVAs

► Lady Gaga opened the show while scaling a three-storey fire escape

► Other performers included Avril Lavigne, Bruno Mars, Simple Plan

Lady Gaga kicked off last night's MuchMusic Video Awards with a performance of Edge of Glory — but the show had already received a jolt of star power in the form of teen-pop titan Justin Bieber.

The 17-year-old shocked the frenzied fans lining the show's red carpet when he arrived in a nondescript SUV. Many of the screaming teens who clogged blocks of downtown Toronto on a warm evening broke into tearful shrieks upon spotting the superstar, who had not been scheduled to appear.

"It's great to be here with all the fans in my home country," said Bieber, clad in a pink blazer, white graphic T-shirt and jeans, with a pink scarf hanging from his back pocket.

His girl-friend, Disney actress Selena Gomez, co-hosted the show, and Bieber carried two nominations into the evening. Asked who he was excited to see, he was coy.

"I am most excited to see Selena perform tonight — I like her song, it's a great song," he said, before discussing an upcoming acting project he's developing with Mark Wahlberg.

"I'm really excited because it's able to demonstrate my athleticism," he said, before confirming that the project would be "basketball-related."

Down With Webster nabbed the award for best pop video and marvelled as they hoisted the trophy — a nearly five-kilogram block of aluminium alloy. "It's heavy!" pointed out the band's MC, Cam Hunter.

Black Friday for teen singer

Rebecca Black's official Friday music video has been taken off YouTube.

The page where the video starring the 13-year-old singer once played now says it "is no longer available due to a copyright claim by Rebecca Black."

Black's spokesman says her team sent a takedown notice to YouTube because of a dispute over the video with Ark Music Factory, the company Black's parents paid $4,000 to produce the song and video.

Earlier this week, the firm began charging viewers $2.99 to watch the clip.

Lawyers for Black and Ark Music have been haggling over who owns the rights to everything associated with Friday since it became a sensation earlier this year.

The video had amassed more than 160 million views and more than three million "dislikes."

The divorce syndrome

► Earlier this month, researcher Hyun Sik Kim of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, released an eye-opening study ► Children of divorced parents often fall behind their classmates in math and social skills ► We talk to Kim about the possible long-term impact

SAM CASTONE
LIFE@METRONews.ca

METRO WORLD NEWS

You studied children during the first two years after the divorce. Why is that period so crucial?

I studied that period mainly due to data availability — information was available only up to spring of fifth grade, although now, information up to eighth grade is available, which enables me to extend my analyses. But one of the main controversies around divorce is whether children of divorce catch up with children from intact families some time after divorce. That's why it was very important to examine development of children of divorce after divorce occurs.

What surprised you the most?

That I failed to find negative impacts of divorce in the pre-divorce stage. People tend to think that couples go through intense marital conflict before they decide to divorce — otherwise why choose to divorce? And it's widely accepted that children under parents' marital discord experience developmental setbacks, such as retardation in cognitive skills and high frequency of problem behaviours.

► "Children of divorce would not want others to know," researcher Hyun Sik Kim says.

However, my study finds that there is no differential growth in the pre-divorce stage.

Yet you found their social skills were stunted?

I found that children of divorce lagged behind children from intact families in the growth of interpersonal social skills in the during-divorce stage. Why, I can only speculate. One possibility is that children of divorce go through emotional problems, which is consistent with my finding that children of divorce experienced problems in internalizing their problem behaviours. Another reason may be related to stigma attached to parental divorce, so that children of divorce would not want others to know their own situations, which may lead to less frequent interactions with others. It should also be added that these behaviours were reported by teachers.

Do you have any good news for children of divorce?

I found that development of children of divorce did not worsen in the post-divorce stage even though they did not catch up with children from intact families. In other words, children of divorce developed as similarly as children from intact families in the post-divorce stage.

Divorce is so common these days. Do you think, eventually, anti-social behaviour and low math scores will be the norm for most kids? In other words, will we have to redefine what we expect from children?

This is really a hard question to answer from my study. One very important finding in my study is that children from intact families suffer more compared to children of divorce if the former children were in families plagued by marital conflicts. In this case, we can predict positive effects of divorce for those children. But remember, I just examined children two years after divorce. I cannot at all predict how children of divorce develop until they become adults.

Turning others on to offsetting

► Canadian company helping save African lives with a CO2 cuts program ► Find out what you can do to help

Carbon offsets — money paid by eco-conscious companies for carbon emissions they have not been able to reduce — are now being used to save lives in the developing world.

Offsetters, a Vancouver-based provider of carbon-management solutions, has become the first Canadian company involved in offering a high-quality cookstove program in Africa.

"The big appeal of these projects is that the carbon benefits are very clear," says James Tansey, CEO of Offsetters. "The side benefits of doing this are, in some ways, even more important."

The new stoves are bound for Uganda, where most cooking is done indoors, burning wood, garbage or whatever waste materials are available. This is such a dirty method, installing the new stoves will be like removing 4,000 cars from the world's roads. The potential health benefits are startling.

"Indoor air quality is one of the largest causes of child mortality — more significant than malaria," Tansey notes. "So this project leads not only to reductions, but also very significant improvements in health and well-being."

This is green policy at its best. A world-wide effort to reduce CO2 emissions in the air — through the purchase of carbon offsets — leads directly to safer, longer lives in Africa.

"For these kinds of projects, companies that are reducing their emissions within their operations put a price on carbon," explains Tansey.

"They're paying maybe $20 a ton for the carbon emissions they can't reduce. That money is then pooled, and used to subsidize the cost of the cookstoves."

Offsets come in two kinds: a voluntary market, and one demanded by eco-friendly legislation.

"The global market is around $113-million in voluntary transactions. The regulated market, which is also something we work in — particularly in Europe — is hundreds of millions of dollars in transactions."

GREENING UP YOUR WORKPLACE AND OFFICE SUPPLIES

Highlighters might seem like small beans but it's estimated that office supplies account for 10 per cent of all landfill waste. Although many businesses are now sourcing paper with recycled content, those pens, highlighters, staplers and ink cartridges still add up. But there's good news. Refillable highlighter brands are on the market, much like ink cartridges for photocopiers and printers. Ask for them at your local office supply store or check on-line. Another simple way to reduce waste is to avoid over-purchasing. You should also select sustainably produced supplies.

I suggest you set up a green team for your workplace. Businesses emit lots of energy. Everything from lighting and heating to computers and photocopiers use up plenty — and that's not to mention emissions from industry and staff commutes.

Meet the man with the iron wardrobe

► Metro chats with Wang Kang, a 25-year-old whose slightly unorthodox office attire is causing quite the stir

An ordinary office day may be boring, but it might cheer you up when you find out that your colleague is a superhero. A telecoms company employee, Wang Kang stunned his office colleagues and boss in Shanghai, China, when he strutted into the office in his homemade Iron Man suit on June 3.

Wang, age 25, told Metro that his Iron Man MK 1 suit is made of high-density foam, wires and tubes and then painted the colour of aged iron. It took three months and 3,000 yuan ($465) to finish this 50 kg armor costume.

What inspired you to make this Iron Man suit? I have been a crazy fan since the first Iron Man film was released in 2008, and I like doing handmade stuff. I thought it would be so cool if I could make Iron Man armor so simply. Maybe I just wanted to be cool at the beginning. But it's much cooler than I thought after I finished it.

How did you feel when you walked into the office like that? I felt so cool and excited when I walked into the office with this Iron Man suit on, and some of my colleagues didn't recognize me and even got scared of me. It was great fun that people saw me as if I was a real superhero. Then I was so happy that everyone praised my effort, even my boss complimented me.

Has this Iron Man suit changed your life? I never thought I could be famous because of it, now I have become very busy replying to all kinds of emails and messages from my own fans, which I enjoy. In fact many women want to know me and be my girlfriend, because they think I am a creative and interesting guy. And the other day, I received an email from The Embassy VFX Team, the visual effects company that created the Mk 1 sequence for Iron Man film. They think I am great to make such a suit, that was just an incredible experience.

How long does it take to put this suit on? Is it easy to move in this suit? With someone's help, it takes about four or five minutes to put it on. It has a skeleton-like frame inside, so it is not so heavy to move. I can't dance but I can go to the toilet by myself with this suit on.

When 'hey bud' turns into 'hey boss'

► A promotion can be painful when the lucky employee loses friends over the switch ► Here's how to handle it

LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

It's hard to say who to feel sorrier for: the co-worker who misses out on a big promotion, or the unlucky knave who gets it.

Officemates who watch their old friend move up a floor often lose hope, career counsellors note — as if their career is dogpaddling in place. But the newly-crowned boss? They lose friendships, embark on a life of solitary lunches without that exhilarating spirit of workplace camaraderie.

"Most everyone does it wrong, and it becomes a total disaster," executive coach Cynthia Shapiro says. "You lose all your friends. It's a serious issue and it's very common."

But it doesn't have to be. Here's how to handle that transition when one ► It's fine to climb the corporate ladder, but just make sure you don't fall down.

workplace pauper becomes the new company prince.

Going from Worker to Boss

New boss task number one, Shapiro says, isn't to strongarm your old equals into respecting — or worse, fearing — you. It's to make them comfortable with the uneasy arrangement.

"Don't come in and tell them what to do — you're not above them," she cautions. "The first thing you want to do is ask 'What can I do for you? What can be done better? What can I do to make your work better?' Make sure they know you advocating for them." That doesn't mean, however, that you should get too chummy.

"You don't want to be on either end of the spectrum," says Meredith Haberfeld, founder of the Institute for Coaching. "Don't be getting drunk after work with who used to be your peers or start acting like you're above them. Be yourself."

And don't downplay your promotion, either, she adds.

"Fake humility is thin veneer, and people can see right through it."

When Your Friend Becomes the Boss

Watching an old pal become your overseer can boil up a pot of resentments, Shapiro notes, but it really shouldn't.

"Your friend is now the person in charge of whether you get a raise, what your job security is like," he says. "That's a great place to be."

Make sure you express that, too, she adds.

"You definitely always want to say 'I'm really happy for you,' just so they know you're not feeling threatened," she states.

And if you are feeling threatened? Grow up.

"Keep your eye on the prize," Haberfeld says. "Give yourself one week-end to go have a drink, be pissed off, talk to your family, and then wrap it up in a bow and leave it alone."

'How 'bout adding on another zero'?

Jobs can be hard to come by, especially for recent college or university graduates with limited experience. So what happens when that first offer comes in and the salary or benefits aren't quite what you expected?

Many people's inclination is to accept it anyway.

"Given the job market, there's not much available. People are really excited to get anything," said Jillian Berman, who graduated from the University of Michigan this spring and has a paid internship this summer with a news outlet.

Taking what's offered is the safe route for those entering the job market for the first time.

► If you handle it correctly you might just walk away with a little more moola in your pocket than you had started with.

"Employers these days are feeling a little bit of entitlement," said Robert Orndorff, associate director of Career Services at Pennsylvania State University.

Each student's situation is different, of course, and the first thing career counsellors do when a student comes in with a job offer is to ask a lot of questions, Orndorff said. How badly does the student really want this position? Does it match their values? Is it something they'd love to do? How much risk is the student willing to take?

As for negotiations, "There's not going to be a lot of room if there isn't a lot of experience," cautioned Jack Chapman, author of Negotiating Your Salary: How to Make $1,000 a Minute (Mount Vernon Press). THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Major domination by McIlroy

► Irishman erases Masters collapse, wins U.S. Open in record fashion

Every time Rory McIlroy lined up a shot yesterday, there was some sort of record on the line, some kind of history to be made.

That was this year's U.S. Open version of suspense. There was never any doubt that the kid from Northern Ireland was going to win it.

In complete control of his emotions and his game, McIlroy never slipped. He won his first major championship by shooting a 2-under 69 at Congressional and closed his four-day onslaught at 16-under 268, eight shots ahead of Jason Day and four shots better than the U.S. Open scoring record formerly held by four players, including two named Woods and Nicklaus.

After the final tap-in, Gerry McIlroy met his son as he walked off the green. "Happy Father's Day," the new champion said.

Happy Father's Day, indeed.

All week, McIlroy's performance was compared to Tiger Woods' 15-shot blowout at Pebble Beach in 2000.

"I was trying to go out there today and emulate him in some way," McIlroy said. "I played great for four days and I couldn't be happier."

The win comes two months after a collapse so thorough, some wondered if McIlroy could recover. He took a four-shot lead into the final day of the Masters, but after hitting his 10th tee shot near a cabin on the grounds of Augusta National, he melted down, shot 80 and finished 15th.

His shot on the 10th hole yesterday wasn't comparable. On the 214-yard par-3, a downhill shot over water, McIlroy knocked the ball above the hole, then watched as it stopped for a split second and started spinning backward before stopping an inch or two from the hole.

He tapped in for a birdie that got him to 17-under par at a tournament that had never seen a score lower than 12 under before Friday.

"That was the point in the round that I really felt it was mine to lose," McIlroy said.

McIlroy now owns the scoring records for 36, 54 and 72 holes at the toughest test in golf and he became only the third player to break 70 in all four rounds of the U.S. Open.

The Boston Red Sox honoured the Stanley Cup champion Bruins with a 15-minute on-field ceremony before yesterday's baseball game against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Reds end scoreless streak against Blue Jays

- Miguel Cairo's two-run blast good enough for win against Toronto
- Bronson Arroyo reverses fortunes against Jays for eight strong innings

► Jay Bruce steals second base ahead of the tag by Aaron Hill at Great American Ball Park yesterday in Cincinnati.

Miguel Cairo hit a two-run homer in the sixth off Carlos Villanueva, stopping Cincinnati's streak of 16 scoreless innings, and the Reds got their first win over an American League team this season, beating the Toronto Blue Jays 2-1 yesterday.

The Reds had dropped their previous five interleague games against Cleveland and Toronto.

Bronson Arroyo (6-6) ended his streak of dismal days against the Blue Jays. The right-hander gave up five hits, including Aaron Hill's homer, in a season-high eight innings. Arroyo had lost his last three starts and five straight decisions against Toronto.

Villanueva (4-1) lost for the first time since Aug.

$10M

The Toronto Blue Jays signed shortstop Yunel Escobar to a two-year contract extension yesterday worth $10 million US. He will earn $5 million in 2012 and 2013.

17, 2009, with Milwaukee, where he was a reliever the last two years.

Francisco Cordero pitched the ninth for his 15th save in 17 tries. He moved one ahead of Jeff Montgomery for sole possession of 19th on the career list with 305 saves. Hall of Famer Goose Gosage is next at 310.

First baseman Joey Votto had three hits after failing to reach base in the first two games of the series. The Toronto native received the Lou Marsh Trophy before Saturday's game. The award honours him as Canada's top athlete for 2010.

Four men primed and ready at Wimbledon

Having won four of the past five Grand Slam tournaments and 10 in all, Rafael Nadal was asked on the eve of Wimbledon about quickly closing in on Roger Federer's record of 16.

Nadal cut in to clarify. "Very close? No. I am very far," Nadal said yesterday. "Six is a lot."

Perhaps. Still, the 25-year-old Spaniard is looking more and more like someone who will be able to challenge, if not surpass, whatever Federer's final tally is. As long as a couple of other guys don't get in the way, that is.

For years, Federer and Nadal were the men to beat at major tournaments. These days, they're joined at what is a competitive and compelling top of the game by a pair of 24-year-olds, Novak Djokovic and Andy Murray.

That Big Four filled out the semifinals at the French Open two weeks ago, and most everyone expects them to be the final four standing in a fortnight's time at Wimbledon, where play begins today with Nadal as the defending champion.

"That's maybe something that's a bit different than maybe in the past, where maybe one of the top four guys wouldn't feel so comfortable on grass," said Federer, a six-time winner at Wimbledon. "But this year, it seems like all of us are, which is a good thing."
